TEST 92:

A young man in a French town claimed he was better at household chores than his wife. So she left him. He had to take care of things on his own. He learnt to iron, cook, clean and wash. One day he wanted to get rid of a particularly problematic stain on his clothes. He remembered that his mother had told him that gasoline cleans exceptionally well. So, he poured gasoline instead of washing powder into the washing machine. Then he went shopping. When he returned, his apartment had disappeared. A spark in the machine had caused an explosion which had burnt down the whole apartment. The stain was also gone.

TEST 93:

The lady who had the maximum number of children in Germany lived about 500 years ago. Her tombstone states that she gave birth to 38 boys and 15 girls, a total of 53 babies. This is not a high number when compared to a Russian farmer's wife who is supposed to have had 69 children, almost all of whom were born as quadruplets, triplets or twins. It is not known how many of them survived.
